TENAGA Nasional Bhd (TNB) will host Asean Elenex 2013, the 10th such exhibition, from March 20 to 23 at the Kuala Lumpur Convention Centre.

The biennial exhibition is a platform for local and foreign industry players to assess the latest technologies to improve energy generation, transmission and distribution.

The exhibition will also focus on renewable energy in line with the Government's commitment to reduce its dependence on fossil fuel energy sources.

It will be held alongside Industrial Automation 2013 (IA 2013), which is a showcase for automated manufacturing process systems and innovative component providers.

TNB president and chief executive officer Datuk Seri Azman Mohd said the exhibitions will serve as an excellent platform for industry players to exchange ideas, experiences and knowledge in order to meet the energy needs of Malaysia and the region.

"This year marks another successful collaboration with Malaysian Exhibition Services," he said.

"The theme of this year's joint exhibition is pertinent, as Prime Minister Datuk Seri Najib Tun Razak announced last October that the national energy objective was to have 5.5% of the nation's energy needs met by renewable energy by 2015, five years ahead of the original target date of 2020," Azman added.

Meanwhile, Malaysian Exhibition Services chairman Tan Sri Asmat Kamaludin said it would be the definitive platform for the country's energy and automation needs. He hoped exhibitors and trade visitors would find the 2013 instalments of these events to be of benefit.

"AE 2013 and IA 2013 continue a strong tradition we have built over the years of providing a platform where information and industry or product updates can be easily disseminated," Asmat said.
